Bios

Eve Gentry – Eve was born Henrietta Greenhood in San Bernardino, CA on August 20, 1909. In 1917 she began to study ballet, folk and ballroom dance and in 1928 she moved to San Francisco and began studying modern dance. It was in 1936 that she moved to NYC where she began a dance career with the Hanya Holm Company.

She choreographed her most famous dance piece Tenant of the Street in 1938. She married her childhood friend and beau Bruce Gentry in 1944 and chose the professional name – Eve Gentry.

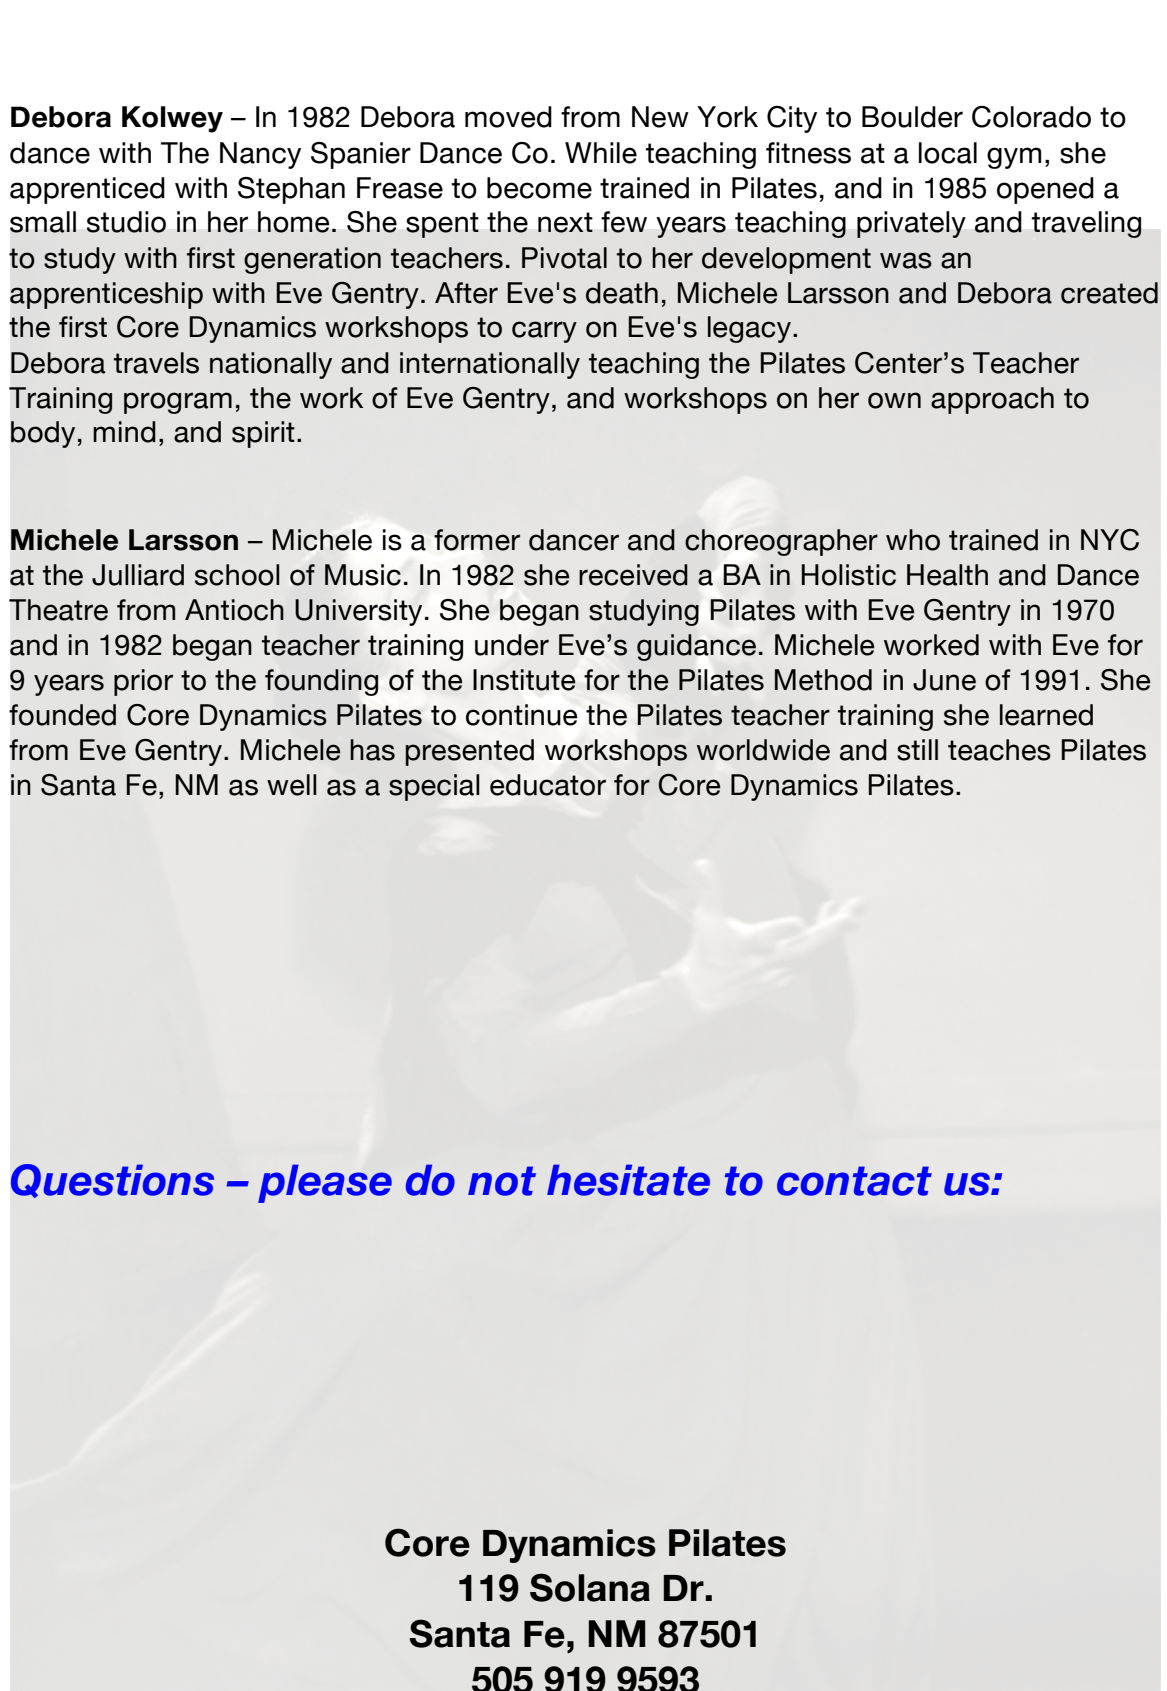

In 1940 Eve and 3 other teachers founded the Dance Notation Bureau. She was in fact the first American dancer to teach Laban notation in the US. Eve directed her own dance company from 1944 – 1968. She was also a charter faculty member for the High School for the Performing Arts and the New York University School of the Arts. Most significant in this context is that she served as teacher and associate with Joseph Pilates in NYC from 1942 – 1968. During this time Eve had a radical mastectomy in 1955 and knew that the only person she could turn to for help was Joseph Pilates. So much muscle had been removed she could not lift her arms. With Joe's help and guidance she was able to return to dance in one years time.

She relocated to Santa Fe, NM in 1968 and established a dance studio as well as a Pilates studio with the equipment that Joe had given her prior to her departure from NYC. Eve worked with the Santa Fe opera and choreographed and danced in Stravinsky's La Rossignol in 1969 and 70 and at the age of 63 danced in the world premiere of Villa Lobos – Yerma choreographed by Jose Limon.

Throughout her more than 50 year career Eve was a dancer, teacher, coach and choreographer for countless stage, film and television projects. In 1979 Bennington College honored her with the 'Pioneer of Modern Dance' award and in 1989 was chosen by the State of New Mexico as a 'Santa Fe Living Treasure'.

Eve died on June 17, 1994 at the age of 84. Although she trained only 3 individuals to teach the Pilates method in her lifetime, her contribution to the preservation and development of the Pilates method remains to this day remarkable.

Suzanne Gutterson – Suzanne was born in NYC. She opened and operated the Suzanne Gutterson School of Dance in Port Washington, NY in the early 1960's. In the later part of the 1960's she moved to Santa Fe, NM and was introduced to Pilates by Eve Gentry. She taught dance at Eve's studio and after one year of intensive training and mentoring Eve made Suzanne her assistant in the studio. Suzanne reflects that the time she spent with Eve was invaluable and that through the years Eve's words and philosophy have guided her teaching. She is a distinguished instructor on Pilates Anytime, on the Advisory board of Pilates Style magazine and an instructor for Core Dynamics Pilates. Suzanne still works out of her home studio in Albuquerque, NM.

Debora Kolwey – In 1982 Debora moved from New York City to Boulder Colorado to dance with The Nancy Spanier Dance Co. While teaching fitness at a local gym, she apprenticed with Stephan Frease to become trained in Pilates, and in 1985 opened a small studio in her home. She spent the next few years teaching privately and traveling to study with first generation teachers. Pivotal to her development was an apprenticeship with Eve Gentry. After Eve's death, Michele Larsson and Debora created the first Core Dynamics workshops to carry on Eve's legacy. Debora travels nationally and internationally teaching the Pilates Center's Teacher Training program, the work of Eve Gentry, and workshops on her own approach to body, mind, and spirit.

Michele Larsson – Michele is a former dancer and choreographer who trained in NYC at the Julliard school of Music. In 1982 she received a BA in Holistic Health and Dance Theatre from Antioch University. She began studying Pilates with Eve Gentry in 1970 and in 1982 began teacher training under Eve's guidance. Michele worked with Eve for 9 years prior to the founding of the Institute for the Pilates Method in June of 1991. She founded Core Dynamics Pilates to continue the Pilates teacher training she learned from Eve Gentry. Michele has presented workshops worldwide and still teaches Pilates in Santa Fe, NM as well as a special educator for Core Dynamics Pilates.
